The two large grand-stands just east of the Eiffel tower will be masses of flags, bunting and humanity long before the hour set for the opening.

Phinney's Band will be stationed in the south-side grand stand, and will enliven things with a grand concert, prior to the beginning of the ceremonies. At 11:30 o'clock the parade to the grand stand will begin, starting at Eleventh Street. There will be four bands in the parade, preceding the carriages with the Governor, the Mayor and the minister. These bands will be 160 yards apart in the following order:

for the people with whom he came in contact.

For four months the patriotic citizens embracing the Carnival Association have labored unceasingly, day and night. They have worked for the glory of Richmond, and now they see their labors rewarded by one of the most magnificent public affairs that was ever given in the State.

During these months the city has been advertised from one end of the State to the other, and the people of Virginia and North Carolina are to-day looking at Richmond as the leading city of the South. The advantages of this city as a commercial center and a manufacturing point have been dwelt upon through the tens of literature that has been spread broadcast by the Carnival Association, and when the hundreds of train loads of risitors come into the city during the week they will have the opportunity of judging for themselves what Richmond offers to the world. to the world.

BETTER THAN THE OTHER.

BETTER THAN THE OTHER.

The last Carnival reposes in the memory of the people as a delightful dream. The present Carnival will prove a profitable reality, for there have been so many improvements made, so many important parts of a successful enterprise added, that the leading features of last year's Carnival will have been east into the background, should comparisons be made. The public-spirited men who have worked so hard for success can but feel proud that their efforts have resulted in such a splendid culmination. They are due and deserving the thanks of the merchants and citizens generally, for such a gathering of strangers here can but be benefited.

This Carnival will present features from which information, as well as amusement, may be derived. At many points along the wonderful booth street will be found exhibits of moving machinery, mechanical contrivances, serviceable instruments of all kinds, electrical mechanism, and many other things that offer the student of mechanism perfect object lessons.

In other directions are to be seen scores of amusement booths, with attractions of designed to disclose the lighter side of life, and where the multitude may, at its own volition, set aside the more serious thoughts of life for a while and engage in the festivities and merriment that goes to make life worth living.

Aside from the sober and the gay sides of the Carnival season, the artistic point of view comes out. This is shown in the beatiful decorations, the perfect arrangement of the many electrical lights, and the art that is displayed in the construction of the floats and the costuming of the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe and the King and his Courtiers.

The perfect light effects will cause expressions of admiration from all sides.
